

Constitution

Tyranny means the power of one individual. The summer of 1787, representing twelve of the thirteen states in Philadelphia were fifty-five delegates. One problem with the state representation before the Constitution was created was no central government, which was a problem because the people in the state representation couldn't force taxes which means no money for the government. Another problem with the state representation before the Constitution was that there was no chief executive, which was a problem because states were organizing their own armed forces, conducting foreign trade negotiations. The three main ways that the Constitution protects against tyranny are Federalism, Separation of Powers, Checks and Balances.

The Checks and Balances is included in the Constitution to protect the United States from tyranny. Document C suggest, "the three branches of government should not be so far separated as to have no constitutional control over each other." This quote is significant to show the Constitution protects against tyranny because it creates three separate but equal branches. The three branches of government are the Judicial branch, Executive branch, and Legislative branch.

A second way that the Constitution protects against tyranny is Federalism. According to Document A, "Hence a double security arises to the rights of the people. The different governments will control each other, at the same time that each will be controlled by itself. The point is important to show the Constitution protects against tyranny because they care about the rights of the people and what they want for the society. To elaborate on my thought I think the quote is significant because it ensures that the Constitution is against tyranny.

A last way that the Constitution protects against tyranny is Separation of Powers. The Document B, claims that, "Liberty requires that the three great department of power should be separate and distinct."

The James Madison quote shows the Constitution protects against tyranny because separate and distinct powers of government/department.

The three main ways that the Constitution did protect against tyranny are Checks and Balances, Federalism, and Separation of Powers. Document A, Document B, and Document C shows the Constitution protects against tyranny. As Americans it is important to care about The Constitution because it protects our nation against tyranny and cruelty. It is good that there is no tyranny in the USA because there would be a lot of violence and would be dangerous.
